

San Isidro, Santa Fe County, New Mexico

(Section 14)

The project is in Santa Fe County, in north-central New Mexico. The study evaluated several options to protect San Isidro Road from erosion caused by the Santa Fe River. The recommended plan consists of a gabion grade control structure and 700 linear feet of rip-rap. Plans and specifications are essentially complete. The project was completed in July 2001.

Santa Fe County is the local sponsor for the project.

